

Code of Conduct

This policy covers expected workplace behavior, conflicts of interest, appropriate use of company resources, confidentiality, and employee responsibilities when representing the company.

5.1 Professional Workplace Behavior. Employees are expected to communicate respectfully with coworkers, managers, customers, and other individuals they interact with while performing their duties. Employees must not engage in threatening, abusive, discriminatory, or intentionally disruptive behavior in the workplace or during company-related activities.

5.2 Attendance and Workplace Responsibilities. Employees are expected to follow their approved work schedules and attend required meetings and workplace activities. Repeated failure to follow an approved schedule may result in management review.

5.3 Conflicts of Interest. Employees must disclose actual or potential conflicts of interest when their personal, financial, or outside business interests could interfere with their responsibilities to the company. Employees must notify their manager or the designated compliance contact within 10 business days after becoming aware of a potential conflict.

5.4 Outside Employment. Employees may participate in outside employment or business activities provided that the activity does not interfere with their company responsibilities, involve unauthorized use of company resources, or create a conflict of interest. Employees must obtain written approval before accepting outside work that involves a current company customer, supplier, or direct competitor.

5.5 Gifts and Business Benefits. Employees must not accept gifts, payments, discounts, or other benefits when accepting them could influence, or reasonably appear to influence, a business decision. Gifts with a value exceeding $100 must be disclosed to the employee's manager within 5 business days.

5.6 Company Equipment. Company-issued computers, mobile devices, software, and other equipment must primarily be used for authorized business activities. Limited personal use is permitted when it does not interfere with work responsibilities, violate company policy, create a security risk, or result in significant additional costs.

5.7 Company Internet and Communication Resources. Company networks, email accounts, messaging systems, and internet access must not be used to conduct unauthorized commercial activities, distribute malicious software, access prohibited material, or interfere with another employee's ability to work.

5.8 Personal Storage and Software. Employees must not install unauthorized software on company-managed devices or transfer company information to personal cloud-storage accounts.

without authorization. Software required for business purposes must be obtained through the approved IT process.

5.9 Confidential Information. Employees must protect confidential company information and must not disclose it to unauthorized individuals. Confidential information may include customer information, internal financial information, employee records, business plans, and non-public operational information.

5.10 Use of Company Resources for Personal Activities. Employees may not use company equipment, facilities, accounts, funds, or other resources for personal commercial activities. Limited personal use of company resources is permitted only when it is incidental and does not interfere with company operations.

5.11 Reporting Misconduct. Employees who become aware of suspected misconduct, unauthorized use of company resources, or a potential conflict of interest should report the matter through the designated reporting channel or to their manager. Reports should be made as soon as reasonably possible after the employee becomes aware of the concern.

5.12 Policy Compliance. Employees are responsible for understanding and complying with this policy. Violations may result in review or disciplinary action in accordance with applicable company procedures. An exception granted to one employee does not automatically apply to another employee.