

Training & Development Policy

This policy covers employee eligibility for company-sponsored training courses, professional development programs, and certification reimbursement.

13.1 Training Eligibility. Regular full-time employees who have completed at least 90 calendar days of employment may request company-sponsored training when the training is relevant to their current responsibilities or an approved development plan.

13.2 Probationary Employees. Employees in their probationary period are not normally eligible for company-sponsored external courses unless the training is required for their position or specifically approved by their manager and Human Resources.

13.3 Approved Training Courses. Company-sponsored courses must be relevant to the employee's current role, required for compliance, or included in an approved professional development plan. Training selected solely for personal interest may not qualify for company sponsorship.

13.4 Manager Approval. Employees must obtain manager approval before registering for a company-sponsored course. The manager should confirm that the training is relevant to the employee's responsibilities and that the employee's absence from normal duties can be accommodated.

13.5 Training Budget. Eligible employees may receive company-sponsored training up to $1,000 per calendar year. Amounts above the annual limit require additional approval from the department head and Human Resources.

13.6 Certification Reimbursement. The company may reimburse eligible employees for professional certification examination fees when the certification is relevant to the employee's current role or an approved career-development plan. Certification reimbursement is limited to $750 per certification unless an exception is approved.

13.7 Pre-Approval Requirement. Employees must obtain written approval before registering for a reimbursable certification examination. Payment for an examination made before approval is not automatically eligible for reimbursement.

13.8 Certification Renewal. Renewal fees for an existing professional certification may be reimbursed when the certification remains relevant to the employee's role. Renewal reimbursement is subject to the applicable annual training budget and approval requirements.

13.9 Course Completion. Employees receiving company-sponsored training are expected to complete the approved course. When an employee withdraws from a course without an approved reason, the company may review whether the associated costs remain eligible for reimbursement.

13.10 Certification Result. Reimbursement of an approved certification examination does not depend on passing the examination unless the applicable certification program or written approval specifies otherwise. Employees should provide the required examination documentation after completing the certification process.

13.11 Reimbursement Documentation. Employees requesting reimbursement must submit proof of payment and the required course or examination documentation through the designated expense process. Reimbursement requests should normally be submitted within 30 calendar days after completion of the course or examination.

13.12 External Training During Working Hours. Employees attending approved training during scheduled working hours must coordinate their absence with their manager. Approval for training does not automatically modify the employee's regular work schedule.

13.13 Online Training. Approved online courses may qualify for company sponsorship when the course meets the same relevance and approval requirements as other training programs. Employees must use approved accounts or platforms when company access is provided.

13.14 Required Training. Training required by the company for an employee's position, security responsibilities, safety requirements, or regulatory obligations may be funded outside the employee's discretionary professional-development budget.

13.15 Employment Changes. Employees who transfer to another department should confirm whether previously approved training remains relevant to their new role. A change in position does not automatically cancel training that has already been approved and scheduled.

13.16 Policy Compliance. Employees and managers are responsible for following the approval, budget, completion, and reimbursement requirements of this policy. Exceptions to the standard training or certification limits require appropriate management and Human Resources approval.
